Two Farmers in Disagreement on Agricultural Act

W. C. Johnson, Blevins, Hits Program—M. H. Moody, Hope, Favors It

A TARIFF PROBLEM

Two Letters Debate Question of Compensating the Farmer

Editor The Star: I am wondering if Mr. Farmer of Hempstead county really realizes what he is facing on December 10 again. I consider the vote we are to take on that day one of the most critical votes that we have ever taken in this county.

I ask this question: If you vote in favor of this compulsory Centralized farm bill, what are you doing?

The following is what I say you are doing, according to my judgment: You are doing like Esau of old: You are selling your birthright for a mess of pottage. By this I mean, you are giving up to a great extent that great blessing given to us by our forefathers, which is freedom and liberty of conscience. Did you know in voting for this law that you would be favoring a communist movement to centralize the farmers in the hand of one man. Also, did you know that this whole AAA program has been ruled unconstitutional by the supreme court. Do you remember how Mr. Wallace and the president made fun of the supreme judges because of their decision?

Mr. Farmer, are you one of those fellows that believe that democracy in America is a failure, and we do not need to preserve for the unborn future that blessed freedom and liberty that we have so wonderfully enjoyed because of our forefathers? If so, vote for this centralized law and let one man tell you what to do.

Mr. Farmer, are you one that listens to those bought federal political high-living office men? If so, you had better think three times before you vote. Examine yourself thoroughly and see if you are voting for principle or for money. The office fellows will hold money before your eyes until they make you forget every principle that ever blessed the human race. Does the common reason teach us for the past six years that we have been fooled and deceived? Did they not tell us in the beginning that the foreign countries had refused to buy our cotton and the thing to do was to reduce and force those countries to buy? They could never grow enough cotton for themselves.

Now what do they tell you? They say our foreign market is gone for good. And they say we are compelled to reduce to our home consumption. Which time did they tell the truth?

Mr. Farmer, the whole farm program is inconsistent, unworkable, and contrary to free government, and it will take us down instead of up, and cause us to lose every ounce of liberty that was bought by the blood of our forefathers.

Mr. Farmer, how can you believe in a program of less in order to have plenty? We were told back in 1932 to give the drinker more in order to have less drinkers and less bootleggers. What do you now see? This is the same trick that was pulled by the 32 beer vote in 1932 and killed the 18th amendment. This vote will reflect on the whole constitution.

In regard to this five-bale program, it is like all the centralized government programs, which I say are contrary to a free government. It would increase the standard of living to the extreme. Besides, this program would contradict all that the government has said and done, so I see no chance for

26 Children Killed As Train Hits School Bus

Utah Rural Bus Is Hit on Crossing by Fast Freight

Bodies Brought From Rural Accident Scene to Salt Lake City

GOING TO SCHOOL

40 to 60 Youngsters, 12 to 16 Years Old, on Board the Bus

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—(P)—A fast freight train crashed into a loaded school bus near here Thursday, killing 26 and seriously injuring at least a dozen others.

W. E. Speakman, chief clerk of the Rio Grande & Western railway, said 26 dead had been counted.

The bodies were taken to mortuaries throughout the city, and attempts were being made to locate relatives to assist in identification.

Estimates of the number in the bus ranged from 40 to 60.

The dead and injured were scattered along the right-of-way for hundreds of feet.

The accident occurred at a rural crossing 10 miles south of here. The bus was bound for Jordan High School. The ages of the victims ranged from 12 to 16 years.

The condition of the bodies, and the inaccessibility of the crossing, made a definite check on casualties difficult.

Protest of Nazi Savagery Is Reaffirmation of Faith

A significant thing has happened in American life during the last few days. For the first time in many years, there has developed an issue of vast importance on which the American people have shown themselves to be in complete agreement—and have shown themselves also to be very much in earnest.

The newest Hitler pogrom simply turned America's collective stomach. The spontaneous, nation-wide chorus of indignant protests that poured forth was a revelation. Here, if nowhere else, was an issue on which all Americans thought and felt as one.

On the surface, perhaps, there is nothing so very remarkable about all of this. After all, no decent people can enjoy the sight of a bully torturing an utterly defenseless victim. A crime against humanity and against civilization, when it is as easily recognizable as the one just committed by the Nazis, certainly ought to draw protests.

Yet that simple stand for ordinary decency and humanity goes to the root of the whole matter.

For this whole fight against dictatorship, against tyranny, against repression and regimentation in all their forms and for liberty, democracy and freedom—what is it, at bottom, but a fight for ordinary decency and humanity?

Those are the first casualties under any dictatorship. It is not decent and humane, for instance, to deny men the right to speak and think as they please, to persecute those who are of different convictions from yours, to arrest without warrant and imprison without trial, to substitute force for reason and to subject men to mental and emotional straitjackets. Yet every dictatorship begins with precisely those acts, committing them under the plea that necessity compels them.

And the noise that the dictators make, the apparent successes that they have won, often make us forget what their power is based on: a direct and simple offense against the most elementary principles of civilized conduct. So we actually get to the point where we can talk about the good things which this or that dictator has done for his whole program is founded on a profound and unqualified wrong.

This new Hitler pogrom restores the whole picture to its proper focus. Here the real meaning of dictatorship—any dictatorship—is brought out into the open in such a way that no man can fail to see it for what it is. If we never realized it before, now we are compelled to realize that tyranny means a brutal and contemptuous denial of the most fundamental ideals of a decent and humane society.

That is why this spontaneous, nation-wide revulsion against the Nazi excesses is so significant.

It reveals that the American character simply cannot stomach the obscenities on which any dictatorship must be built. It shows that the ultimate defense of our freedom is something fundamental to the spirit of all of our people. This protest against the savagery of the Nazis is a reaffirmation of our faith in the American way of life.

Parents Should Try to Prevent All Fears of Their Children

Fear is a normal phenomenon for young to avoid fear. The very young human beings because it is protective. The worst fear of all is the fear of the unknown, but fear aroused by either a real or an imaginary danger is significant.

Fear has been studied by doctors, psychologists, philosophers, and scientists in every field. It has been said that babies may be trained while do all of these things if it dislikes some person or something in its environment.

As a child becomes older, it fears specific things. It is said that the blurt child fears the fire. The child may fear not only actual manifestations like fire, but images which arise in its imagination. Children fear that which is strange so that a child may fear the first sight of black clothing. It may fear the first person whom it sees with glasses. The child when very young will not fear thunder and lightning, but the child imitates its parents. If the mother or the older children "put on a show" when thunder and lightning occur, the child soon does the same.

One of the commonest fears in childhood is fear of the dark. Once established, this fear may proceed well into adult life so that there are grownup people who cannot sleep unless there is a light in the room. Yet this is not a normal condition and must always be considered as reflecting deficiencies in training.

Some children suffer with what are called night terrors, awakening suddenly in the midst of the night and shrieking with fright. Other children actually suffer similar conditions during the day. There has been some attempt to associate the presence of night terrors with difficulties of intestinal digestion, with the presence of worms in the bowel or with similar physical conditions, but apparently these terrors or the into physical conditions in the majority of cases.

Certainly the child who does not sleep well and whose mind is crowded with images left from the activities of the day is more likely to suffer with fears at night than is the one whose day has been full of pleasant, happy activities, who goes to bed somewhat tired and who sleeps soundly throughout the night.

Associated with fears there may be all sorts of habit spasms, difficulties of speech like stammering, or even actual confusion. For this reason parents should inform themselves about the nature of childhood fears and do everything that can be done to prevent them.

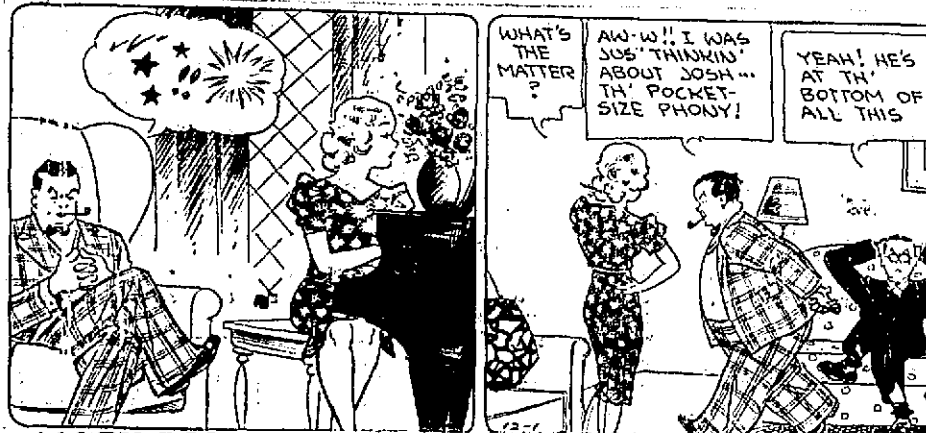

As the race of great birds dwindled down to a few hundred birds, museums over the world realized that it was only a matter of time until the bird became extinct, and they offered enormous prices for specimens. This only speeded up the work of extinction.

So scarce is water in Central Australia, that a tribe of men have trained themselves to go for days without drinking. They live on the moisture contained in yams.

Too Tired To Pray

Sib thought, when night had finally ended day, "Dear Lord, tonight I am too tired to pray." And wearily she closed her eyes in sleep. Slipping far into the shadowed deep. Up in Heaven the dear Lord heard and smiled. "Today she soothed a little crying child. She stopped her work to take old Ella (Kloop) a fragrant, warming bowl of her good soup. Her house was orderly, her garden tended. Her children fed, their clothes all clean and mended. Her husband, home from work, found happiness And quiet peace in her deep gentleness." The dear Lord smiled again. "Too tired to pray?" Her hands have offered prayers of love all day!—Selected.

this program anyway. I could say much more but believe this is sufficient to cause a few farmers to think. I am nothing but a hard-working farmer myself, having farmed all my life, and have so far gone through the depression without any of the increased billions that the government had poured out to cure this depression. Have they done it? You are the judge. Don't fool yourself. You know these big debts can't increase always; there will have to be a paying something. These little mortgage pain-rattled checks will not last always. So weigh the above well before you vote on December 10. I am for freedom and liberty, now and forever. I think it is high time for the American people to wake up to the danger of all these centralized moves today. They will destroy our individualism if allowed to continue.

JUDY ALCOCK—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between the navy and a life of luxury.
BILL—Judy's fiancé, a lieutenant in the navy.
JACK—Bill's friend, a sailor.
DIANE—Bill's sister, a nurse.
MRS. ALCOCK—Judy's mother.
MRS. HANLEY—Bill's mother.
MRS. HANLEY—Bill's mother.

Yesterday, Bill's body lay in state. Judy, who had been his fiancée, was at the funeral. She had been his fiancée, and she had been his fiancée.

CHAPTER XXII

COMMANDER SLOANE found her still clinging to Jack's hand, still looking into his eyes. The commander harrumphed loudly, and Judy turned, with a slight blush. "This young fellow's strong as an ox," said the doctor jocularly. "A bash like that would have killed anyone else. But all he's got is a broken arm and a few busted ribs." "Internal injuries?" Judy asked swiftly.

Commander Sloane's eyes avoided hers. "Well—we don't know—takes time to be sure—" "How long will it be before he's well?" "Now, now, don't be rushing things! A good long rest in bed never hurt anybody."

So it was going to take a long time. Weeks. Months, maybe. She wanted to ask if Jack would ever fly again, and suddenly she knew that he had asked himself. Probably it was the first thing he said when he regained consciousness. She didn't ask. Jack was weak. He smiled, and tried to talk, but there were tell-tale white lines around his mouth, and his face was pinched with exhaustion. She said, "Darling, I'll be here every time they'll let me in. I'll come ten times a day. Oh, try to get well quickly!" She bent over him. "You must sleep, now. Goodbye. I'll come back in the morning."

"Goodbye," he said. "Judy, Judy—" There was so much he wanted to tell her, she knew. But his breath came short, the cruel plaster cast was like a heavy weight on his body. She said soothingly, "I know, darling. See you tomorrow!" She smiled bravely.

WHILE her mother and father and the skipper of the Enterprise and almost everyone else were busy arranging the funeral of her father, Bill, Judy was at the hospital with Jack. The next morning he appeared stronger. "If this accident has brought you back to me, I'm glad of it," he said fiercely. "Oh, Judy, you don't know how I—" "But Bill—" "Of course, I didn't mean. . . . He shouldn't have tried to come down after me."

"He—was swell," she said, with difficulty. "I know. I'm going to do all I can for Diane."

"There's not much anybody can do. She's taking the baby and going back to her folks in Virginia. She'll be able to live on the pension there."

Jack said, "That's the Navy for you. Maybe a woman's a fool to let herself in for it." "No, Diane would do it all over again, even if she knew the end. They were so happy! And we'll be happy. My mother and father have been happy."

"I guess it was you all the time," she said in a shamed little voice. "But I didn't know—until that night. Thinking about you—out there in the water—afraid you were dead—imagining all kinds of horrible things—" She lifted her chin. "But that's part of it. I wouldn't want to have it otherwise!"

He said slowly, "When I get well, Commander Sloane says I'll be good as new. Barring unforeseen complications. I—I'll be flying again, Judy."

"I wouldn't want you to quit," she said. THE next day, Judy sat in the car with Diane and Mrs. Alcock, and the happiness that had lived in her eyes during the hours she had spent with Jack was gone. For this was Bill's final journey. They weren't going to see it all, but she knew how it would go. And Diane knew.

There would be a horse-drawn caisson, borrowed from the Army to do Lieut. William Bell honor. There would be soldiers, and officers on foot, and enlisted men behind. She stole a little glance at Diane. She was white and still. Controlled. But her fingers were curled into fists.

Then they were at the cemetery, and Judy stood up beside Diane, hoping that the other girl wouldn't break down at the last minute. The men who were lined up facing each other on each side of the grave raised their rifles skyward and three volleys rang out. Diane cried uncontrollably; "Bill! Oh, Bill!" Judy put her arms around her. "Cry," she said.

"It will do you good." But she couldn't watch, either, as they lowered the coffin into the grave. She tried to tell Jack about it. But she faltered, her voice breaking. He said, "I know what it's like. . . . And he did it for me." He added, "He would have done it for anyone. He was white."

Diane was leaving for Virginia in the morning. She couldn't stand the empty bungalow, Bill's uniforms in the closet, the eyes of the Navy wives. "So I'll be late tomorrow morning," Judy said. "I'm taking Diane to the station."

SHE held the baby, while an enlisted man from the station carried Diane's bags, and Mrs. Alcock went into the train to see that everything was all right in the compartment. And then Judy was handing little Bill to his mother and saying gravely, "You'll write, Diane? You'll let me know how things are?"

"Be happy, Judy," said Diane, closing her hand over Judy's. "I always said—Jack Hanley's the best on the lot—" And then she was close to tears, and burying her face in the baby's little sweater.

"I'll miss you so," Judy said. "Jack and I will try to come out to see you, first leave we get."

"If you're not ordered to Hawaii, you mean." She hugged the baby. "Bill and I had always expected to—" "Don't darling."

"He's still with me!" Diane said fiercely. "I'm not going to act as if he's gone. He'll always be with me!"

"He's gone," Judy said, and the hot tears were burning her own eyes. "Oh, darling!" And then she and her mother were standing on the platform, waving goodbye, as Diane held the baby to the window and the train crawled out of the station.

"Poor child," said Judy's mother. "All alone. With that baby. I always said they were unfair when they reduced those pensions. A man who is killed in the line of duty should be permitted to leave his wife full pay. It isn't fair."

Judy watched the long train of cars move slowly past. "Mother," she said suddenly. "Does it always end this way—for flyers? Daddy never flew. It was safer and better and surer when he began. They ask so much of us. Diane has nothing now. No more Bill. No more Navy! Maybe it isn't worth it. Maybe a girl's a fool to—" Her mother patted her shoulder. "Even Diane said she should do it all over again," she said. "Service and loyalty are always worthwhile."

Quail Season in Arkansas Opens

More Birds Than at Any Season in Past Ten Years Is Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — (AP) — The AAA's 1938 farm program was credited Wednesday with increasing one crop in Arkansas its farmers probably never considered. Reporting hunters who take to the fields with the season opening Thursday would find more quail than at any time in ten years Secretary D. N. Graves of the state game and fish commission said the AAA was partially responsible.

The government required the farmers to plant more acreage in grains and other feed crops. The quails thrived on the program. The Arkansas season extends through January 31 with a bag limit of 12 birds daily. Graves said the supply of deer this year "definitely on the increase" but herds were badly scattered and hunting probably would be disappointing. The deer season also opens Thursday and extends through December 15. The limit is one buck per season.

Monopoly Is Seen on Rose Bowl Tilt

Directors Also Consider Playing Game Each December

CHICAGO.—(AP)—A possible monopoly on Rose Bowl football games through an arrangement which would confine the event to games between Big Ten and Pacific Coast teams—will be discussed by Western conference athletic representatives at their annual December meeting Thursday. Pacific Coast Conference authorities favor the idea and several Big Ten athletic directors see good points in such an agreement. The principal drawback is that Big Ten teams have to continue practice through cold, snowy weather before playing the contest in summer temper-

Six Leading Grid Teams Accept Bids to Play in Various "Bowl" Contests

TCU Chooses Sugar Bowl After Efforts Fail to Get Carnegie Tech at Dallas—Tennessee and Oklahoma to Play in Orange Bowl

By the Associated Press

The post-season football market did a thriving business Tuesday when top teams announced their acceptance of invitations to play in four intercollegiate "bowl" contests January 2. The acceptances followed closely on the selection of Duke and Southern California Monday as rivals for the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena, Calif.

The latest additions to the list of "bowl" combatants were: Texas Christian and Carnegie Tech, Sugar Bowl at New Orleans; Tennessee and Oklahoma, Orange Bowl at Miami, Fla.; Texas Tech with no rival named as yet for the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Texas; and New Mexico, also looking for an opponent for the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas.

Four of the six are unbeaten and untied—TCU, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Texas Tech—and three of the four still have a game each to play. Tennessee, champion of the Southeastern Conference, has Mississippi to dispose of Saturday, while Oklahoma, Big Six title winner, and Texas Tech have engagements the same day with Washington State and Centenary, respectively.

Texas Christian and Tennessee, while they have accepted bids, must await final approval of their action by the other members of their conferences. In each case, however, this is regarded as a mere formality.

Holy Cross was being sought as the opponent for Texas Tech in the Cotton Bowl, with Utah, champion of the Rocky Mountain Big Seven, the leading candidate for the Sun Bowl game with New Mexico. New York promoters, because of poor weather conditions, postponed until next year their plans for an "Eastern Bowl" game tentatively set for December 10.

TCU Chose Sugar Bowl for Several Pertinent Reasons

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Christian, perhaps the mightiest of all Southwest football teams, Tuesday chose the New Orleans' Sugar Bowl post-season classic for its final appearance on January 2 because:

1. It felt Carnegie Tech, its New Orleans' foe, was the strongest opposition it could face.
2. Carnegie Tech, previously committed to the Sugar Bowl, wasn't available for the Cotton Bowl.
3. Players, the boys who steam-rolled ten straight opponents voiced a preference.

Stunned by their position of "second best" when Rose Bowl invitations were handed out, the Christians immediately made sincere efforts to play in Texas' own game—the Cotton Bowl.

Throughout the night and into early dawn Tuesday, TCU officials sat cooped with J. Curtis Sanford, director-general of the Cotton Bowl game, in an effort to make arrangements for a Texas Christian appearance in Dallas.

Telephonic and telegraphic contacts were made with many leading teams. Carnegie Tech, loser only to Notre Dame on the famed "wrong count" decision and conqueror of mighty Pitt, 21-10, advised Cotton Bowl officials it had committed itself to the Sugar Bowl.

Other contacts failed and TCU officials, at 4:30 a. m. decided to accept the Sugar Bowl's invitation. It was contingent upon approval by the six remaining members of the Southwest Conference—a formality.

Texas Christian players had voted immediately after their triumph over Southern Methodist Saturday to accept a Rose Bowl bid if it was proffered. Duke got the bid and Texas Christian sought out the stiffest foe available—Carnegie Tech, in their opinion.

Holy Cross, Villanova and Utah May Oppose Red Raiders

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Unbeaten, untied Texas Tech Tuesday was formally invited to play in the Cotton Bowl post-season football classic here on January 2, but no opponent had yet been selected.

Dan Rogers, chairman of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association board of directors, said Holy Cross, Villanova and Utah were being considered as likely opponents of the West Texas team.

Fordham's Rams, defeated only by Pitt but tied, declined an invitation and closed its post-season negotiations when the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans announced it had signed Carnegie Tech and Texas Christian.

Texas Christian officials sat with Cotton Bowl heads throughout the night in an effort to make arrangements for a Dallas appearance, but accepted the Sugar Bowl bid when it was announced Carnegie Tech would be their opponent there.

Efforts to match Tennessee and Oklahoma here failed when the Orange Bowl grabbed those two undefeated, untied teams.

Nyland Satisfied Over Invitation to Orange Bowl

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Coach Bob Nyland expressed satisfaction Tuesday that his untied and unbeaten Tennessee Volunteers had been invited to play undefeated and untied Oklahoma in the Miami Orange Bowl January 2.

Nyland said also Tennessee had considered a game in the Dallas Cotton Bowl. A report from Dallas said Texas Christian University accepted a bid to the New Orleans Sugar Bowl only after officials had been unable to obtain a "suitable" foe for the Cotton Bowl.

"We had under consideration the matter of playing in the Cotton Bowl," said the big Tennessee mentor. "All so in other bowls."

"Evidently we were being considered by the bowl officials also. What happened when the selections were made, I do not know, but we are well satisfied with the Orange Bowl and our undefeated opponents, the University of Oklahoma."

If Nyland felt any disappointment that his team, Southern Conference champion, was not selected for the Rose Bowl or Sugar Bowl, he gave no indication of it as he sent his squad through a spirited workout in preparation for the final game of the season, Saturday against Mississippi in Memphis.

Nyland said he believed Texas Christian and Carnegie Tech formed a good combination for the Sugar Bowl.

Not so affable were Tennessee followers, who were plainly disappointed that Tennessee did not get a bid either to the Rose Bowl or Sugar Bowl as the Volunteers face a sixth undefeated season during Nyland's 12-year reign here. Tie games marred five perfect seasons.

Excitement Spreads Across Campus at Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla.—(AP)—Excitement spread across the University of Oklahoma campus Tuesday night as the word got around that the undefeated Sooners football team would play Tennessee in the Orange Bowl at Miami, Fla., January 2.

Saturday's intersectional game with Washington State here was forgotten for the moment. Students started planning ways to follow the team South.

Tom Stidham, young head coach and athletic director whose Sooners have won 13 games in a row, withheld comment until official word came from Miami.

"We'll be happy to play Tennessee," he said when assured Miami officials had made the announcement. "It should be a great game."

Both Oklahoma and Tennessee are unbeaten and untied this year but Tennessee also has another scheduled game to play. The Vols meet Mississippi Saturday.

Records of the tow teams this year are almost identical. Tennessee has won nine games and held opponents to 18 points. Oklahoma, in a like number of games, has held the opposition to 12 points.

Both are champions of their respective conferences—the Sooners of the Big Six and the Volunteers of the Southeastern. Tennessee ranked fourth nationally and Oklahoma fifth in this week's Associated Press poll.

The Sooners were so excited during Tuesday's workout they let the freshmen run them ragged in scrimmage.

"I saw some news reel pictures of Tennessee's team and I'm scared to death," said Waddy Young, Oklahoma's leading candidate for All-America honors. "It will be a good vacation for the boys, but we'll go down there to win."

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

The Man Who Imitates Wallpaper Also Escorts Hedy Lamarr About

He started doing imitations and look at him now. His name is Reginald Gardiner and with him is Hedy Lamarr.

HOLLYWOOD.—You never can tell what some odd little talent may do for you. Take Reginald Gardiner, the man who imitates wallpaper. He came by his fame accidentally, but it has established him firmly in Hollywood, and a bachelor and all, he has become the right-hand man of the heady Hedy Lamarr.

I call that pretty good going. Gardiner had been playing straight parts on the English stage for about a dozen years and never guessed that he was destined to panic movie and radio patrons. One day he was asked to entertain at a boys' school, which he once attended, and on the train going down he wracked his brain for a scheme to divert the youngsters. It was a rascally, bumptious little train, and its clanking and snorting began to work a pattern in the actor's thoughts.

Wallpaper Imitations Inspired in Bed.

So when he got to the school he imitated the train, accompanying the imitation with a lecture. It went over big, so big that word of it preceded him to London. Friends made him repeat the stunt, and then the public clamored for it. He enlarged his repertoire. His representation of the monotonous patterns of wallpaper came to him, quite simply, while he was lying in bed.

On Broadway, in the revue, "The Show Is On," he did his agitated pantomime of a cop orchestra leader, which was repeated here in "Born to Dance." Later roles have been less screwy, but he still entertains his friends with imitations of almost anything, especially music. Just now he is playing in "Katherine the Last" with a broken arm. He broke it falling down stairs, not leading an imaginary orchestra. The script has been revised to justify the arm's being carried in a sling.

Sneezing His Way to Success

Another specialist is Billy Gilbert, the sneezer. If Gilbert hadn't been a poor barber he probably never would have become a film comic. On the other hand, if he hadn't been a barber at all he likely wouldn't have the top in pictures, he has been shot innumerable times, stabbed, kicked to death, and has fallen to his doom from planes, a trapeze and a wagon. One of his finest demises was when a team dragged him to glory in the early sequences of "In Old Chicago."

Hollywood Homelife Pays Well

"Death is a pleasure at Hollywood prices," he admitted. "But the trouble is that when an actor is supposed to be killed, they generally arrange to bump him off the payroll in a hurry. 'Chicago,' now, was an eight-month assignment for the other actors, but I was out of a job in six weeks."

"I'm having my first big break in this 'Tail Spin.' When they sent me the script I saw right away where there's a pilot named Speed who gets killed in a crash, so I said, 'Well, here I go again.' So you can imagine my surprise when they put in Eddie Norris as Speed and made me Connie Bonnet's flying instructor, who lives all through the picture."
